PREFACE.

THE great war, which makes the year 1914 an historic date, has involved in a fierce and mighty conflict the great powers of Europe and spread with equal fury over sea and land from China to Cape Horn. Unprepared, except at sea, for a war of such magnitude, but bound by her plighted word to the defence of violated neutrality and oppressed nationalities, the British Empire, unanimous and undismayed, set herself with grim determination to ensure victory, whatever the cost and sacrifice. To the call to arms, the whole nation responded with alacrity, and her stalwart sons from the Dominions overseas rallied to the flag with equal promptitude and loyalty. Though the thunder of the enemy's guns has been heard upon the shores of the motherland, the war has been mainly waged, owing to the presence and power of the Royal Navy, beyond the borders of the Empire, and the British Forces have been free to take their allotted place on the battlefields of the Continent by the side of their comrades of the French and Belgian Armies, and to stem the tide of invasion in the West as their Russian and Serbian Allies have done in the East.

Though the account given us of the campaign is for military reasons necessarily meagre, we hear day by day of the gallant soldiers and sailors who have fallen in the fight, and now and again of an individual act of courage and enterprise, which gains for some hero the Victoria Cross or the badge of the Distinguished Service Order. They have earned a high place in the Roll of Honour, and afford the best incentive for recruiting if any indeed were needed. The bearing of our soldiers at the front and the eagerness of those at home to join them are convincing proofs of the determination of the nation to carry the war to a successful issue.

Great has been the sacrifice in blood and treasure and every class in the community has borne its share. The editor has been greatly impressed by the fine response made by the families, of whom this work treats, to the call to arms. They make, it is true, no claim to superior merit. They have done, and are doing, only their duty. Noblesse oblige. Yet when the editor has to record day after day an endless series of appointments of members of their families to the army, to note their promotions and services in the field, to add in so many instances the significant words "despatches," "wounded," and "killed in action," and in others "D.S.O.," and "V.C.," he thinks the services of their class worthy of special mention. Other classes of less historic associations have doubtless also distinguished themselves and sometimes in more trying circumstances, since their prospects in civil life are often placed in serious jeopardy by their patriotism. All honour to them. His Majesty has, with his intimate knowledge of his people's feelings and his instinctive tact, not only gone himself to the battlefield to do honour to his soldiers, but has permitted the Prince of Wales to serve at the front, and to share with them the dangers and hardships of war.

Perhaps the most striking honour of the year was the bestowal upon Field Marshal Sir John French of the Order of Merit, which confers neither rank nor title, but is reserved for the very few of real eminence. It was also during his visit to the camp that His Majesty invested the King of the Belgians with the Order of the Garter, a fitting honour for that chivalrous Sovereign, and his gallant army. On General Joffre was conferred the Grand Cross of the Bath, while some of his generals were decorated with the Order of St. Michael and St. George. On many of his brave soldiers the King bestowed the Victoria Cross, that precious emblem of valour, including in their number, for the first time, native Indian soldiers as promised at Delhi.

Besides these war honours, the honours and awards for service in civil life pale into insignificance, though they have, this year, been many and important, and of high interest. An earldom has been conferred on Lord Kitchener, the Secretary of State for War, who never fails to achieve success whether in the field or in the council. Major-General Brocklehurst has been created Lord Ranksborough. The legal profession has also been highly honoured. The Lord Chief Justice has been created Lord Reading; the Master of the Rolls, Lord Cozens-Hardy; Sir Alfred Cripps, Lord Parmoor; and Mr. Ure, Lord Strathclyde. Two other former Ministers, Mr. Bryce and Sir Sydney Buxton have been created Viscounts. Sir Harold Harmsworth was elevated to the peerage as Lord Rothermere, Sir Leonard Lyell as Lord Lyell, and Sir Edgar Vincent as Lord D'Abernon. Mr. Walter Cunliffe, Governor of the Bank of England, has within the last few days been created Lord Cunliffe. It is interesting to note that half of these twelve peers have chosen place names for their titles, the rest retaining their surnames as titles of peerage. A more detailed list of this year's creations is given on page viii.

No baronies have been called out of abeyance during the year, though the claims of several co-heirs of ancient baronies by writ have been before the Committee for Privileges of the House of Lords for Report, and favourable resolutions on these petitions have been submitted to the Crown.

The three Sees created by Act of Parliament in 1913, were filled in the course of this year by the appointments of the Right Rev. John Edwin Watts-Ditchfield as Bishop of Chelmsford, the Right Rev. Henry Bernard Hodgson as Bishop of St. Edmundsbury and Ipswich, and the Right Rev. Leonard Hedley Burrows (Bishop Suffragan of Lewes) as Bishop of Sheffield. The Right Rev. George Nickson (Bishop Suffragan of Jarrow) was translated to the See of Bristol, vacant by the resignation of the Right Rev. George Forrest Browne. The Right Rev. Herbert Edward Jones was consecrated Bishop Suffragan of Lewes; the Right Rev. John Nathaniel Quirk, Bishop Suffragan of Sheffield, has become Bishop Suffragan of Jarrow. The Ven. Samuel Mumford Taylor, Archdeacon of Southwark, has been nominated Bishop Suffragan of Kingston-on-Thames, but has not yet been consecrated.

Fifteen baronetcies have been created during this year, of which the full list follows the list of peerage creations. Among those honoured are Sir Gerard Lowther, lately Ambassador at Constantinople, Sir Edward Ward, late Permanent Under Secretary of State at the War Office, and Sir Vansittart Bowater, late Lord Mayor of London. One of the creations enumerated more properly belongs to last year's list, that of Maj.-General Sir John William Campbell, C.B., who was created a baronet 29 November, 1913, with special precedence from 1804. Like his two immediate predecessors, he had borne the title of a baronet without satisfying the authorities of the merits of his claim. A similar case was treated in somewhat similar fashion in 1911.

Since the 1st December, 1913, thirty-five peers have died, two Dukes, thirteen Earls, five Viscounts and fifteen Barons. The list is given in tabular form on the ensuing pages, and the necessary changes showing the succession of their heirs have all been made in the text, under the respective titles. The two dukes who have died were the Duke of Argyll and the Duke of Buccleuch, great Scottish nobles, the former allied by marriage to our Royal House. Among the earls was that gallant commander Field Marshal Earl Roberts, who died full of years and honour, within sound of the enemy's cannon and among his beloved soldiers, whom he had so often led to victory. By his death his baronetcy and barony became extinct, while his earldom devolved, in accordance with a special remainder in the patent, on his daughter. By the death of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian statesman, his senior barony became extinct, while the junior one of similar title passed to his daughter by special remainder. With Lord O'Brien, the famous Irish judge and wit, his baronetcy and barony expired. Of the other peers who died, Earl Annesley, Viscount Hawarden, and Lord Congleton were killed on service.

No less than fifty-seven baronets have died since the 1st December of last year, of whom eight were killed in action, namely, Sir G. G. S. Baillie, Sir Evelyn R. Bradford, Sir A. C. Gibson-

Craig, Sir Robin Duff, Sir Richard W. Levinge, Sir G. N. Ogilvy, Sir Frank S. Rose, and Sir Francis Waller. The complete obituary list is given on page ix. All the changes occasioned by the succession of the new baronets have been made in the text under their names, though their predecessors in some cases have only died within the last few days. Five baronetcies became extinct by the deaths of Sir Augustus Prevost, Sir W. Ogilvy-Dalgleish, Sir E. Durning-Lawrence, Sir A. M. Watkin, and Sir John Barker. It will be noticed that in three cases the succession has passed twice during the year. In the first case Sir Augustus R. Warren, 5th Bart., died 1 April, 1914, and was succeeded by his son, Sir Augustus R. J. B. Warren, 6th Bart., who died 28 August following, and was succeeded by his son. In the second case the Right Hon. Sir William R. Anson, 3rd Bart., died 4 June, 1914, and was succeeded by his nephew, Sir Denis G. W. Anson, 4th Bart., who died 3 July following, and was succeeded by his cousin. In the third case Sir C. G. Assheton-Smith, 1st Bart., died 24 September, 1914, and was succeeded by his only son, Sir R. G. V. Duff, 2nd Bart., who died 16 October following, and was succeeded by his son. Three cases of the kind happening in the same year are surely without parallel.

In addition to the names in this year's list of deceased baronets, it will be convenient to record here the names of three others who died abroad sometime since, though the dates of their deaths have only recently been ascertained. Sir Henry Burnaby, 5th Bart., died without male issue in 1894, when his baronetcy probably became extinct. Sir Richard H. K. Farmer, 5th Bart., died, so the editor has been informed, in 1913, when his baronetcy became extinct. Sir George Compton Reade, 9th Bart., died in 1908, and was succeeded by his son, who is resident in the United States of America. Fuller particulars of these three titles are given in the text.

The appointments during the year to the Privy Council and the very numerous appointments to the Orders of Knighthood are given in the lists of the Orders, as well as full particulars of those honoured, in the Knightage.

The editor desires to thank his numerous correspondents for the valuable information they have given him, and to acknowledge the indispensable assistance which the heraldic authorities have continued to afford him, with their traditional courtesy.

The task which the editor set himself this year has been a heavy one, for besides the general revision of the book, and the work necessary for the re-writing of a great number of the pedigrees in the light of modern research, and the enormous correspondence entailed, he has been confronted, in the last five months, with the rapid succession of events due to the war. Though his work has been at least doubled, he is satisfied that the new edition has been thoroughly brought up to date, and the abnormal number of changes during the year duly recorded. He has, by deferring publication to the last moment, been able in BURKE'S PEERAGE for 1915 to chronicle events happening at the very close of the year, which books of reference published a month before are obviously unable to include.

KEY TO THE WORK

AND

GUIDE TO RELATIVE PRECEDENCE.

THE numbers prefixed to each name indicate the RELATIVE PRECEDENCE of each person. To avoid unnecessarily large numbers no distinction has been made between brothers and sisters, and uncles and aunts of the same peer or baronet, nor between dowagers. It must be borne in mind that, the nearer to, or higher in the succession a person is, the higher is his or her precedence; thus, a son of a baronet ranks before his uncle, and a dowager peeress ranks before the wife of the living peer.

The numbers prefixed to the names in the following list, though indicating the relative position of those entitled to precedence, do not, of course, show the actual numerical position of each in a general scale of precedence. Thus 17,131 does not mean that there are 17,130 persons of higher rank than the one mentioned, but that he belongs to Class 17 in the scale of precedence, called for convenience 17,000 (see SCALE OF PRECEDENCE) and that the honour from which he derives precedence is 131st in order of seniority in its own degree. The numbers in fact combine two series.

This list includes:—

Archbishops and Bishops.
Peers.
Peeresses.
The sons of Peers.
The daughters of Peers.
The wives of the sons of Peers.
Maids of Honour.
Baronets.
The wives of Baronets.

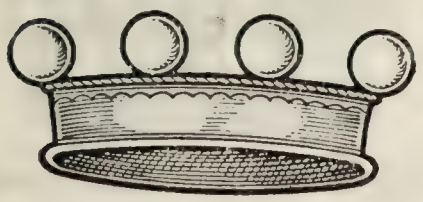
Burke's Peerage and Baronetage.



Introduction.

A PEERAGE is the status of a Peer, an hereditary dignity derived in origin directly from the Crown, the fountain of honour, and devolving on a right line of heirs implied or expressed in the instrument of creation. Chief among the privileges which the possession of a peerage confers is the right to a seat and vote in Parliament in person, or since the Acts of Union by representation. Peerage dignities are of five degrees of rank to which distinctive titles are assigned, namely, Baron, Viscount, Earl, Marquess, and Duke. Every peer, however, is the equal, the peer of the other, and all enjoy equal rights and privileges, irrespective of the degree or the number of dignities they hold.

Though Lords of Parliament of later days have little in common with the Feudal Barons and Earls of old, they may at any rate be accounted their successors, just as Parliament itself has succeeded the earlier Councils by a gradual process of evolution. A baron by tenure was the tenant-in-chief of the King, and held his lands, according to the Feudal system, conditionally upon the performance of certain honourable services to the Sovereign, such as personal attendance in the field and in the council; and the provision of a stipulated quota of Knights, armed cap-à-pie for the King's wars in proportion to his territorial possessions, reckoned at so many Knights' fees. But in the reign of KING JOHN, an alteration of great importance took place in the rights and duties of these Tenants in capite, for only the principal Barons, or Barones Majores, were summoned to attend parliament by particular writs from the King; and the rest, who acquired the appellation of Barones Minores, were called by one general summons from the Sheriffs of their respective counties; and in the following reign, a new law is said to have been made, by which it was established that no person, though possessed of a Barony, should come to parliament without being expressly summoned by the King's writ. Barony by Tenure has ceased for ages. Of late years claims have been made to dignities by right of tenure; but none of these claims has proved successful. There is, however, one Earldom extant—that of Arundel, which the Duke of Norfolk enjoys by the feudal tenure of Arundel Castle; but this honour endures by special act of parliament passed in the 3rd year of KING CHARLES I. To Barons by Tenure succeeded

Barons by Writ.

The Barons by Writ were the great personages whom the King chose to attend him in Parliament, and were, for the most part, but not exclusively, his tenants-in-chief. They were summoned by writs called brevia clausa, from being closed with wax, and impressed with the Great Seal of England. The first of these summonses on record appears to have been tested on the 24th of December, in the 49th year of HENRY III.; but from that period no similar writ seems to have issued until the 22nd year of EDWARD I., when about sixty persons were summoned to attend the King

"wheresoever he might be, to advise on the affairs of the Kingdom"; but it has been questioned whether that summons constituted a Peer of Parliament.

To establish an hereditary Barony by Writ, it was requisite, according to some, says Sir William Blackstone, that two writs of summons should have issued, and a sitting in two parliaments have taken place; but this is a misapprehension; for in the case of the Barony of Clifton there was but one writ and one sitting and that Barony was allowed. Baronies by Writ are heritable by heirs male or female; but in the event of the decease of the Baron without issue male, and with more daughters than one, the Barony falls into abeyance amongst them, and so continues until one of the daughters, or the sole heir of one of the daughters, only survives. The Crown can, however, at any time interfere, and terminate the abeyance in favour of any one of the co-heirs, but it cannot alienate the Barony from the representatives of the first Baron. The mode of terminating an abeyance in favour of a co-heir is, by summoning the individual by the title of the Barony which had been in abeyance. The course observed towards a Peer of a higher dignity is the issue of Letters Patent by the Crown in confirmation of the Barony; and a similar course, that of Letters Patent, is adopted towards heiresses.

The mode of creating Peers by Writ of Summons has been, however, a long time discontinued, and the only writs now issued are those to the eldest sons of Dukes, Marquesses, and Earls,* in their fathers' Baronies; but any such writ does not create a new Barony, the honour being still descendible according to the original limitation. If, however, a writ of summons issue to the eldest son of a Peer, as a Baron, under a misapprehension that the Barony was vested in his father, then the writ is deemed a new creation, and the dignity is heritable as a Barony by Writ. This was established in 1736, by the decision regarding the Barony of Strange, in which James Stanley had been summoned in 1628, under the supposition that the Barony had belonged to his father, William, 6th Earl of Derby; and again, in the similar case of the Barony of Clifford. The first writ to an elder son is stated to have issued in the 22nd year of KING EDWARD IV., when Thomas FitzAlan was summoned to parliament (in his father, the Earl Arundel's barony) as Baron Maltravers. As Barons by Tenure gave place to Barons by Writ, so the latter have been succeeded by Barons by Letters Patent.

The first instance of this new form of creation occurred in the reign of RICHARD II., when John Beauchamp, of Holt, was elevated to the peerage as Baron Beauchamp of Kidderminster, by Letters Patent, dated the 10th of October, 1387. Lord Beauchamp never took his seat, however, in parliament, as he died in the same year, and was succeeded by his son, with whom the dignity expired in 1420. In olden time it was deemed necessary to invest with robes the newly created Baron in open parliament; and so lately as the beginning of the 17th century, KING JAMES I., in person solemnly inducted the Barons created by patent in the 13th year of his reign, by enrobing each peer in scarlet, with a hood furred with miniver; but in the same year it was determined to discontinue those ceremonies in future, the legal advisers of the Crown having declared that the delivery of the Letters Patent constituted a sufficient creation. In the Patents of more modern times the ceremony of public investiture is expressly dispensed with.

The Mantles of Barons are of crimson velvet edged with miniver, the cape furred with miniver pure, and powdered with two bars or rows of ermine, i.e., narrow pieces of black fur. Baronesses wear the Mantles of Barons edged round with miniver pure, two inches in breadth, and the train three feet on the ground.

Coronet—A plain circle of silver gilt, surmounted by six silver balls at equal distances; the cap of crimson velvet, turned up ermine, with a golden tassel on the top.

Viscount.

The next grade in the British Peerage is that of Vice-Comes, or VISCOUNT, which title formerly applied to the sheriff of a county, but was not used as a designation of nobility before the reign of HENRY VI., when that monarch created John, Baron Beaumont, K.G., by Letters-Patent dated 12th February, 1440, Viscount Beaumont, a dignity which expired with his lordship's son and successor

* There is an instance, in the reign of KING CHARLES I., of the son and heir of a baron who possessed two baronies, having been summoned to parliament in one of them. The Hon. Conyers Darcy, son of Conyers, Baron of Darcy and Conyers (who was subsequently created Earl of Holderness) was summoned to parliament in his father's barony of Conyers in 1680.

in 1507. A Viscounty is always created by patent, and it descends according to the specified limitation. The honour was originally conferred as an advancement to Barons, but afterwards created frequently with the Barony; and in modern times it has been conferred without a Barony, as in the instances of Viscount Combermere, Viscount Sidmouth, Viscount Halifax, Viscount Cross, &c.

The style of a Viscount is "Right Honourable," and he is officially addressed by the Crown as "Our right trusty and well-beloved Cousin."

The Mantles of Viscounts are the same as a Baron's, except that two rows and a half of ermine are worn on the cape. Viscountesses wear the Mantles of Viscounts edged round with miniver pure, two inches in breadth, and the train a yard and a quarter on the ground.

Coronet—A circle of silver gilt, surmounted by sixteen silver balls; cap of crimson velvet, turned up ermine, thereon a golden tassel.

The dignity of Earl, which existed in England before the Conquest, was, according to Mr. Cruise, originally annexed to a particular tract of land; and there were three descriptions of Earldoms:

"The first was where the dignity was annexed to the seisin and possession of an entire county, with jura regalia; in which case the county became Palatine, and the person created Earl thereof acquired regal jurisdiction and royal seigniory. By reason of the royal jurisdiction, the Earl Palatine had all the high courts and offices of justice which the King had, with a civil and criminal jurisdiction; and by reason of his royal seigniory he had all the royal services and all the royal estreats which the King had; so that, in fact, a County Palatine was in every respect a Feudal Kingdom of itself, but held of a superior lord."†

The second description of Earldom was that which took its title only from a county, but had no territorial possession annexed to it within the county, nor any of the privileges of an Earl Palatine, and which derived its revenue from a participation in the profits accruing from the pleas of the county court.

The third kind of Earldom was constituted by the Crown's granting a considerable tract of land, to be held "per servitium unius comitatus."

For several centuries, Earldoms have been created by Letters Patent, and the descent of the honour regulated accordingly. The ancient ceremony of investiture, as in other dignities, has been discontinued; and, in consequence of the number of earls, the custom of adopting the title from some county or town has been extended to villages, private estates, and family surnames.

The style of an Earl is "Right Honourable," and he is officially addressed by the Crown as "Our right trusty and right well-beloved Cousin."‡

He bears also, upon some occasions, the title of "Most Noble and Puissant Prince."

The Mantles of Earls are the same as a Baron's with three rows of ermine on the cape. Countesses wear the Mantles of Earls edged with pure miniver, three inches in breadth, and the train a yard and a half on the ground.

Coronet—A circle of silver gilt, surmounted by eight silver balls raised upon points, with gold strawberry leaves between the points; cap of crimson velvet, turned up ermine, thereon a golden tassel.

Marquess.

A marquess (Marchio) is the next degree of nobility. "His office (says Sir William Blackstone) formerly was (for dignity and duty were never separated by our ancestors) to guard the frontiers and limits of the kingdom, which were called the marches, from the Teutonic word 'marche,' a limit; as in particular were the marches of Wales and Scotland, while each continued to be an enemy's country. The persons who had command there were called

* Spelman was of opinion that the title of Earl was derived from the Germans; and having been adopted from them by the French, was rendered feudal and hereditary by Hugh Capet.

† Cruise On Dignities.

‡ This mode of address is as ancient as Henry IV., by whom it was first adopted. That Prince, being either by his wife, his mother, or his sisters, actually related or allied to every Earl in the kingdom, artfully and constantly acknowledged that connection in all his letters and other public acts; whence the usage has descended to his successors, though the reason has long ago failed.—Blackstone.

Lords Marches, or Marquesses, whose authority was abolished by statute 27th HENRY VIII., though the title had long before been made a mere ensign of honour."

The first English Marquessate was conferred by KING RICHARD II., in 1386, upon Robert de Vere, who was created Marquess of Dublin, and in the next year, Duke of Ireland. His Grace was, however, banished and attainted in 1388, when his honours became forfeited. The second creation of the same dignity occurs in the same reign, when John Beaufort, Earl of Somerset (eldest legitimated natural son of John of Gaunt), was created, 29th September, 1397, Marquess of Dorset. From that period the dignity of Marquess appears to have remained unused until the reign of EDWARD VI., but thenceforward it became a regular and common grade of nobility.

The style of a Marquess is "Most Honourable," and he is officially addressed by the Crown as "Our right trusty and entirely beloved Cousin."

He bears also the title, upon some occasions, of "Most Noble and Puissant Prince."

The Mantles of Marquesses are the same as a Baron's, with three rows and a half of ermine on the cape. Marchionesses wear the Mantles of Marquesses, edged with pure miniver, four inches in breadth, and the train a yard and three quarters on the ground.

Coronet—A circle of silver gilt, surmounted by four gold strawberry leaves and four silver balls, alternately, the latter a little raised on points above the rim; a cap of crimson velvet, turned up ermine, thereon a golden tassel.

Duke.

The Dukedom, the most elevated dignity in the English Peerage, was first introduced by KING EDWARD III., who, in 1337, created his eldest son, Edward the Black Prince (then Earl of Chester), Duke of Cornwall, with remainder to his heirs the eldest sons of the Kings of England, by which charter the eldest son of the King becomes from birth or the accession of his father, Duke of Cornwall. The second Dukedom was conferred, 1351, upon Henry of Grosmont, 4th Earl of Lancaster, under the title of Duke of Lancaster, which dignity expired at his decease, in 1361, without male issue, but was conferred again in 1362, upon John of Gaunt, who had married the Duke's second daughter and eventually sole heiress, the Blanche, of Lancaster. In the reign of ELIZABETH, anno 1572, the whole Order, with the exceptions of Norfolk and Somerset then under attainder, became utterly extinct, but it was revived about fifty years afterwards by her successor, in favour of George Villiers, created Duke of Buckingham in 1623.

A Duke is styled "His Grace," and the "Most Noble," and he is officially addressed by the Crown as "Our right trusty and right entirely beloved Cousin."*

A Duke is likewise entitled, upon some occasions, "Most High, Potent, and Noble Prince."

The Mantles of Dukes are the same as a Baron's, with four rows of ermine on the cape, Duchesses wear the Mantles of Dukes, edged with pure miniver, five inches broad, and the train two yards on the ground.

Coronet—A circle of gold, surmounted by eight golden strawberry leaves; cap of crimson velvet, turned up ermine, thereon a golden tassel.

SPIRITUAL LORDS.

Archbishops.

ARCHBISHOPS have the Ducal title of "Grace," and take precedence of all Dukes next to those of the Blood Royal. The Archbishop of Canterbury ranks as first lord, and the Archbishop of York as third, coming immediately after the Lord Chancellor. The Archbishop of Canterbury styles himself, "by Divine providence," while the Archbishop of York and the Bishops adopt the term "permission" instead of "providence."

Bishops.

By an Act of Parliament passed in the thirty-first year of HENRY VIII., it was settled that Bishops take precedence of all Barons, and immediately after Viscounts; the Bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, preceding their Right Reverend brethren.

Bishops are styled "Lords," and "Right Reverend Fathers in God."

Note.—In the time of the Saxons, the Bishops, Abbots, and other ecclesiastical persons, held their lands free from all secular services, except the trinoda necessitas,—namely, expeditio, pontium et arcuum extructio, et refectio. But soon after the establishment of the Normans they were charged with the same obligations of military service as laymen. In consequence of this change, the Bishops became tenants in capite per baroniam, and were, of course, bound to attend the curia regis, which at that time was considered as a burthensome office. It is therefore probable that the Bishops did not willingly acquiesce in this alteration; and when the immunities of the church were so much restrained by the Constitutions of Clarendon, in 10th HENRY II., it was expressly declared, that the Archbishops and Bishops should hold their lands as Baronies, and attend the King's court.

The Bishops were always exempt from doing homage for their Baronies, but were bound to take the oath of fealty.

The great Abbots were also bound to attend parliament, if summoned, when they held their land per baroniam.—CRUISE On Dignities.

See now, as to Bishops sitting in Parliament, the 10 & 11 Vict., cap. 108, a statute passed 23rd July, 1847.

PEERS OF SCOTLAND.

THE word Peerage cannot be very properly applied to Scottish dignities until late in the 16th century.

The Scottish Earl sprang out of the Celtic Mormaer, or Great Steward. Seven Earls are enumerated by their names, not titles, in the foundation charter of Scone in 1114; and during the 12th century there existed a body called the Seven Earls, with whose sanction the King acted. They gradually passed from the position of "comites" of the Sovereign to that of Feudal Lords, holding the lands with which their connection had at first been judicial as an Earldom of the Crown. The creation of additional Earldoms formed part of the feudalizing system; and though the Earldoms continued to be spoken of as seven, the Earldoms enumerated were not always the same. The coronation of ALEXANDER II. (1214) is the latest date at which the Earls are specified as seven in number; and their functions afterwards merged in those of the "Communitas."

Earldoms continued territorial much longer in Scotland than in England. From the beginning of the feudal period, nearly to the 17th century the title was usually conferred by the erection of certain lands into an Earldom, the charter but rarely making specific mention of the dignity of Earl. In 1578 the practice first became general of introducing the title of Earl into the charter, and from that date till 1600 half the charters of Earldom in the Register of the Great Seal—they are eighteen in all—make special mention of it. Patents of the dignity of Earl after the English fashion were first introduced in 1600, the oldest being that of the Earl of Winton. The older Earldoms, like lands and other heritable subjects, passed to heirs of line; and in the case of co-heirs the lands were divided and the dignity with the chief messuage went to the eldest co-heir. The husband of a Countess was often, though not always, designed by the courtesy title of Earl.

The title of a Lord of Parliament (as distinct from a minor baron) originated in the reign of JAMES I. The Scottish Parliament was an assemblage in one chamber of the three orders of the "Communitas," Prelates, Barons, and Burgesses. The Earls belonged to the order of Barons. All Barons in the old sense, i.e., landholders holding their lands with baronial jurisdiction, had the right, or rather were under the obligation, of attending the meetings of the Estates. To the less considerable landholders this was a grievous burden, and not always strictly enforced. By a statute of 1428 the "small Barons" were excused from attending Parliament, and an attempt was made to introduce a system of representation, which proved ineffectual. About the same period began the practice of conferring the dignity of a Lord of Parliament on the more considerable Barons, a novelty brought by JAMES I. from England.

The title of Duke was first bestowed in 1398 on the eldest son of ROBERT III., who was made Duke of Rothesay, and the King's brother, Robert, Earl of Fife, who was made Duke of Albany. The latter title was an empty honour unconnected with lands. Down to a late date the title of Duke was almost exclusively bestowed on near relations of the royal house.

The first Marquessate was that of Ormond, bestowed on James, Duke of Ross, second son of JAMES III., at his christening; and the only other instances of this title before the Union of the Crowns were the Marquessates of Hamilton and Huntly. Afterwards the dignity became more frequent, and was sometimes conferred along with a Dukedom.

A Scottish Peerage could, down to the Union, be resigned into the hands of the King to be re-granted to a new series of heirs, a transaction to which the heir alioqui successurus had no right to object, and which was completed by a Crown charter of resignation.

Precedency in right of priority of creation was little thought of till far on in the 16th century. That the great Earls of Douglas, Crauford, and afterwards of Angus would take rank after Earls of older creation would have been unintelligible in the 15th century. As late as 1592 and 1604 the Earl of Angus protested for precedence before not only Earls but Dukes. After the English idea of precedency according to date of creation began to obtain, the disputes to which it gave rise led to the appointment of a Commission in 1606 to rank the nobility of Scotland; and the decreet then pronounced, with such changes as were introduced by authority of the Court of Session, was the basis of the precedence on the Union Roll.

The creation of Scottish Peers ceased at the union of 1707. The Act of Union gave to all Peers of Scotland the privileges of Peers of England, except the right to sit in Parliament and on the trial of Peers. The Scottish Peers are represented in Parliament by sixteen of their number elected by themselves. A Scottish Peer is debarred from sitting in the House of Commons. A large number of Peers of Scotland have since the Union been made Peers of Great Britain, or of the United Kingdom.

PRIVILEGES OF THE PEERAGE.

PEERS and Peeresses are free from all arrest in civil actions, and in such cannot be outlawed, nor can any attachment lie against their person.

Peers are exempt from serving on juries, from attending courts-leet, or sheriff's turns; or, in case of riot, the posse-comitatus.

They are to be tried, in cases of treason and felony, by their Peers.

A Peer gives his judgment not on oath but on honour; but when examined as a witness, he must be sworn.

Peers are tried in courts arranged specifically for the purpose, usually in the centre of Westminster Hall, at the expense of the Crown, which courts are removed as soon as the investigation terminates.

"The honour of Peers," says Sir William Blackstone (1. Comm. 402), "is so highly tended by the law, that it is much more penal to spread false reports of them, and certain other great officers of the realm, than of other men; scandal against them being called by the peculiar name of scandalum magnatum, and subject to peculiar punishments by divers ancient statutes." This proceeding, however, by writ of scandalum magnatum, which is of a civil as well as of a criminal nature, is now almost obsolete, the ordinary modes of obtaining legal redress being generally preferred. Indeed, in a criminal prosecution for scandalum magnatum the defendant would, no doubt, now be allowed the privileges and be subject only to the punishments enacted by the modern Libel Act, the 6 & 7 Vict., cap. 96. It has been held that words are actionable in the case of a peer which are not so in that of a common person: as to say of a peer: "He is an unworthy man, and acts against law and reason." Lord Townshend v. Dr. Hughes, 2 Modern Reports, 150.

Peers have the privilege of sitting covered in courts of justice during their proceedings.

The Barons of Kingsale enjoy the hereditary privilege of being covered in the royal presence, after having made their obeisance.

By the curialitas regni, the eldest son in each degree of created dignity is as of the degree next to his father; and such eldest sons of Peers of the rank of Earl, Marquess, and Duke as enjoy a plurality of titles, take and use the secondary one by courtesy.

All Peers are entitled to carry Supporters to their arms, as incidental to their hereditary dignity, and otherwise adorn them exteriorly with their respective coronets and mantles. Selden states that a coronet is first mentioned in the investiture of Earls in the time of EDWARD VI.; but that they were much more ancient appears from the will of Richard, Earl of Arundel, dated 5th December, 1375, in which he bequeathes his three coronets to his son and his two eldest daughters, a circumstance which proves that coronets were carried as ensigns of high nobility in the fourteenth century, but not according to any rule or restriction as to their descent.

Note.—Some peers of Ireland, created since the Union, and in no wise connected with Ireland, take their titles from places in England; but by a sort of fiction, the name of an English county is never introduced into the patent. Lord Rendlesham is of Rendlesham, without any county. Lord Macdonald is of Slate, in the county of Antrim, whereas Slate is in the Hebrides. Lord Newborough is of Ireland.

THE BARONETAGE.

THE hereditary Order of Baronets was erected by patent in England by KING JAMES I. in 1611, extended to Ireland by the same Monarch in 1619, and first conferred in Scotland by KING CHARLES I. in 1625.

At the institution many of the chief estated gentlemen of the kingdom were selected for the dignity. The first batch of baronets comprised some of the principal landed proprietors, among the best descended gentlemen of the kingdom; and the list was headed by a name illustrious more than any other for the intellectual pre-eminence with which it is associated—the name of Bacon. A glance at the Roll of Baronets will convince anyone of the distinction and nobility of the institution. For some time the possession of territorial influence was the main qualification, and the Order was confined principally to country gentlemen of property and descent. But in more modern days, the circle has been enlarged, and made to include men who have raised themselves and their families to greatness by their pre-eminence in science, literature, commerce, or arms.

The Order of Baronets in Scotland, instituted in 1625, was in its origin connected with Sir William Alexander's scheme for colonizing Nova Scotia. The number was not to exceed 150; the sum payable for the honour was £3,000; and the patents down to 1638 included a grant of specified lands in Nova Scotia, though that colony had before the date in question passed into the hands of the French. The latter creations by CHARLES I. included gentlemen unconnected with Scotland; and in one instance the dignity was granted to a lady, Dame Maria Bolles, of Osberton, co. Nottingham. In almost all the patents granted by CHARLES I. the limitation was to heirs male whomsoever; afterwards, though there was some occasional variety, the most usual limitation was to heirs male of the body.

PRIVILEGES OF THE BARONETAGE.

BY the constitution of the Baronetage, it is declared and provided that Baronets and their heirs male, their wives' sons, daughters, and sons' wives, respectively, or any of them at whatsoever time to come, in all questions concerning any place, precedence, privilege, or other matter concerning them, shall be regulated by the use and practice of custom and law, as other hereditary degrees of dignity are ordained and directed, concerning place, prerogative, and precedence.

The wives of Baronets are Ladies, and enjoy place and precedency, both during the lives and after the decease of their husbands, according to the manner and usage of other hereditary degrees.

The daughters of Baronets have the rank and precedence of their eldest brother.

The Baronets of the several creations have assigned to them by the grant of the royal founder, as a perpetual military post of honour, place in the royal armies of the Sovereign, near and about the Royal Standard for its defence.

The Baronets of England and Ireland bear, as an honourable augmentation, on a canton on their armorial ensigns, the royal arms of Ulster, viz., argent, a hand couped gules, the earlier baronetcies having been erected to promote the Plantation of that province. It is curious to note that in practice this hand is usually represented as a sinister hand, though the Royal O'Neills bore a dexter hand in their arms.

It was at first provided that the Baronets of Scotland should charge their coat armour with a similar augmentation,—viz., the arms of Nova Scotia. By a royal warrant of CHARLES I. in 1629, they became entitled to wear as a personal decoration, an Orange-tawny Riband and Badge,—viz., in a scutcheon, arg., a Saint Andrew's cross, az., thereon an inescutcheon of the royal arms of Scotland, with an imperial crown above the scutcheon, and encircled with the motto, "Fax mentis honestæ gloria," being the motto of HENRY, Prince of Wales, the eldest son of the royal Founder of the Order.

It seems strange that a similar privilege has not been conferred on the other branches of this great hereditary order, more especially as members of all the orders of knighthood have their insignia. Some years ago the baronets sought to obtain by the favour of the Crown some such distinction, and a committee was formed to press their claims. Too much was asked, however, and nothing gained. Possibly, if the baronets had sought only the privilege of wearing a badge, a royal concession might have been made.

Since the Legislative Unions between England and Scotland, and between Great Britain and Ireland, the separate Orders of Baronets have been superseded by the one general institution of BARONETS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, who also bear on their coat armour, as an augmentation, a canton (or inescutcheon), arg. charged with a hand couped gu.

THE KINGS OF SCOTLAND.

KINGS OF SCOTLAND.

WITH all the light that the researches of Celtic scholars and historical antiquaries have lately thrown on the early history of Scotland, some obscurity still hangs over the succession of the kings of the Picts and Daldriadic Scots; our sketch of the Royal Line will, therefore, begin with the union of Picts and Scots, under a King of Scottish race in 850. By the Celtic principle of "tanistry," which prevailed in Scotland nearly to the end of the eleventh century, the succession, hereditary in a particular family, was elective among the members of that family, a preference being given to the oldest and worthiest.

KENNETH I. (called MacAlpin), reigned from 844 to 859.

DONALD I., his brother, reigned from 859 to 863.

CONSTANTINE I., son of KENNETH I., reigned from 863 to 877. He fell in a battle with the Danes, and was s. by his brother,

AEDH, who reigned but one year, 877-8, and is said to have been "slain by his people." His successor was

EOCHA, son of RUN, KING OF STRATHCLYDE, by the daughter of KENNETH I. He reigned 878 to 889; CIRIC or GRIG, son of DUNGAIL, being associated with him. Their successor,

DONALD II., son of CONSTANTINE I., reigned from 889 to 900. He was slain in a Danish invasion, and was s. by

CONSTANTINE II., son of AEDH, who reigned 42 years, 900 to 942, and, harassed by the ravages of the Northmen, retired, in 942, to the Monastery of St. Andrews. His successor,

MALCOLM I., son of DONALD II., reigned from 942 to 954. His cousin,

INDULPH, son of CONSTANTINE II., reigned from 954 to 962. His cousin,

DUBH, son of MALCOLM I., reigned from 962 to 967. His cousin,

CUILEAN, son of INDULPH, reigned from 967 to 971. His cousin,

KENNETH II., son of MALCOLM I., reigned from 971 to 995. His cousin,

CONSTANTINE III., son of CUILEAN, reigned from 995 to 997. His cousin,

KENNETH III., son of DUBH, reigned from 997 to 1005, and was slain at Monzievaird about 25 March, 1005, by his cousin,

MALCOLM II., son of KENNETH II., who reigned 1005 to 1034. He d. 25 Nov. 1034, having had three daus.,

1. Bethoc, m. about 1000, Crinan, the Thane, Lay Abbot of Dunkeld, who was slain 1045, leaving issue,
   1. Duncan, afterwards DUNCAN I.
   2. Maldred, m. Edith, dau. of Uchtred, Earl of Northumberland, and was father of Gospatric, Earl of Northumberland.
      1. A dau., who was mother of Moddan.
2. Donada, m. Finlaec, Mormaer of Moray, and had a son,
   MACBETH, King of Scots.
3. Another dau. m. Sigurd, Earl of Orkney, and had issue.

His grandson and successor,

DUNCAN I., son of CRINAN, Lay Abbot of Dunkeld, and Bethoc his wife, dau. of MALCOLM II. He reigned 1034–1040. He m. a cousin of Siward, Earl of Northumberland, and had three sons, MALCOLM III., DONALD BANE, and MELMARE. In his reign the north and west of Scotland were conquered by the Northmen, under Thorfinn. His cousin, MACBETH, Mormaer of Moray, joining his fortunes to those of the invader, put DUNCAN to death 14 Aug. 1040, and ascended the throne.

MACBETH, son of FINLAEC, Mormaer of Moray, reigned from 1040 to 1057; m. GRUOCH, widow of Gillacomgan and dau. of BODE, son of KENNETH III. His kingdom seems to have been confined to the country south and west of the Tay, Thorfinn ruling over the rest. He was slain by MALCOLM, son of DUNCAN I., at Lumphanan, 15 Aug. 1057, s.p. His stepson and successor,

LULACH, son of GILLACOMGAN, Mormaer of Moray, and Gruoch his wife, dau. of BODE, son of KENNETH III., was made king by MACBETH's party, and after reigning seven months, was slain at Essie, in Strathbogie, 17 March, 1057–8. He had a son, MALSNECHTAI, and also a dau., whose son, ANGUS, succeeding to the Earldom of Moray, was associated with Malcolm, natural son of ALEXANDER I., in an insurrection against DAVID I., but was defeated and slain in 1130.

MALCOLM III., known as Ceannmor, or Great Head, b. about 1031, eldest son of DUNCAN I., ascended the throne, 17 March, 1057–8. Under him, the provinces acquired by Thorfinn, fell again under native rule. He m. 1st, about 1059, Ingibjorg, dau. or widow of Thorfinn, Earl of Orkney, by whom he had issue,

1. DUNCAN II.

He m. 2ndly, in 1068–9, Margaret, dau. of Edward Atheling and sister of EDGAR ATHELING, who had fled to Scotland with his sisters, and by her (who d. 16 Nov. 1093) had six sons and two daus., viz.:

4. Edward, wounded with his father at Alnwick, d. 16 Nov. 1093.
5. EDMUND, mentioned hereafter, d. a monk.
6. Ethelred, Lay Abbot of Dunkeld, d. before 1097.
7. EDGAR,
8. ALEXANDER,
9. DAVID, } successively Kings of Scotland.

1. Eadgith, otherwise Matilda, m. 11 Nov. 1100, HENRY I. of England, and d. 1 May, 1118, leaving issue.
2. Mary, m. 1102, Eustace, Count of Boulogne, and d. 31 May, 1116, leaving issue.

MALCOLM was slain at Alnwick, 13 Nov. 1093, and buried at Tynemouth. His brother,

DONALD BANE became King of Scots, 13 Nov. 1093, but was deposed May, 1094, by his nephew,

DUNCAN II., b. 1060, son of MALCOLM III., by his first wife. He m. about 1090, Ethelreda, dau. of Gospatrick, Earl of Northumberland, and had by her a son, DUNCAN, father of WILLIAM, whose son, William of Egremont, d. under age. DUNCAN II., after reigning six months, was slain 12 Nov. 1094, when

DONALD BANE resumed the throne, 12 Nov. 1094, his nephew, EDMUND, son of MALCOLM III., and Margaret, his wife, being conjoined with him. In 1097, through means of EDGAR ATHELING, DONALD was defeated and expelled from Scotland, EDMUND imprisoned, and the throne assumed by EDGAR, another son of MALCOLM III. DONALD BANE'S granddau. and heiress, HEXTILDA, m. Richard

* The title of DUKE OF CHATELLERAULT was granted by Letters Patent, dated 5 Feb. 1548, to JAMES HAMILTON, 2ND EARL OF ARRAN, Regent of Scotland, and to his heirs, successors, and "ayants cause" for ever.

The exact meaning of this limitation is explained by the 4th article of the Royal Edict of Marly, of 1711, issued by LOUIS XIV.:—

"Par les termes d'hoirs et successeurs et par les termes d'ayants cause tant insérés dans les lettres d'érection ci-devant accordées, qu'à insérer dans celles qui pourraient être accordées à l'avenir, ne seront et ne pourront être entendus que les enfants mâles descendus de celui en faveur duquel l'érection aura été faite, et que les mâles qui en seront descendus de mâles en mâles, en quelque ligne et degré que ce soit."

The title of Duke of Chatellerault at the decease of JAMES, 2ND EARL OF ARRAN AND 1ST DUKE OF CHATELLERAULT, in 1575, became the inheritance of his eldest son JAMES, 3RD EARL OF ARRAN, who d. unm. His brother, LORD JOHN HAMILTON, 1ST MARQUESS OF HAMILTON, had an only son, JAMES, 2ND MARQUESS OF HAMILTON AND 3RD DUKE OF CHATELLERAULT, who d. 2 March, 1624–25, leaving three sons, and no other male issue. The youngest of these sons, Lord John Hamilton, d. young unm. The other two were—JAMES, 3RD MARQUESS OF HAMILTON AND 4TH DUKE OF CHATELLERAULT, and Lord William Hamilton, who eventually s. his brother.

JAMES, the 3RD MARQUIS OF HAMILTON (created Duke of Hamilton with special limitations), d. 9 March, 1648–49, leaving a daughter, ANNE, DUCHESS OF HAMILTON, of whom the EARL OF DERBY is heir-general, and the Duke of Hamilton a descendant. At the death of this James, 3rd Marquess and 1st Duke of Hamilton, his only surviving brother,

LORD WILLIAM HAMILTON, became 2ND DUKE OF HAMILTON AND 5TH DUKE OF CHATELLERAULT, and d. 1651, without leaving any heir male of his body, whereupon the male succession—that is, the male representation of James, 2nd Earl of Arran, 1st Duke of Chatellerault—devolved upon his kinsman, JAMES HAMILTON, 2ND EARL OF ABERCORN, who then became the heir designated by the limitation in the patent conferring the Dukedom of Chatellerault. This James, 2nd Earl of Abercorn, was heir male of the house of Hamilton, heir male of the Earls of Arran, and lineal descendant and heir male of the 1st Duke of Chatellerault. His direct descendant, "de mâles en mâles," and representative in blood is JAMES, present DUKE OF ABERCORN.

The Duke of Abercorn, the Marquess of Lansdowne, and the Earl of Verulam are the only peers who enjoy distinct peerages of the three kingdoms.

Lineage—Genealogical writers, Sir Robert Douglas and others, affirm that the Hamiltons derive their origin from the magnificent Norman race of De Bellomonts, Earls of Leicester, through the Lords of the Manor of Hamilton, in the co. of Leicester, who flourished there previous to the extinction of the De Bellomonts, and who are considered to have been a branch of that family. They carried the same arms as those of the Earls of Leicester, with the difference of THREE cinquefoils instead of ONE, as a mark of cadency; the ancient lords of the manor of Hamilton and the Hamiltons of Scotland bearing for their arms THREE cinquefoils ermine, on a field gules, whereas the De Bellomonts, Earls of Leicester, and their ancestors, the Counts of Mellent, bore ONE cinquefoil ermine, on a field gules. Without attempting, however, to trace the exact line of descent of the illustrious Scottish house of Hamilton from the great and powerful stock of the ancient De Bellomonts, Earls of Leicester, we commence with

Lineage—The family of Acland is one of great antiquity. Deeds and Charters, in which mention is made of HUGH DE ACALEN, temp. HENRY II. The Visitation pedigree carries down the family link by link to HUGH ACLAND, of Acland, living at the time the Visitation was made. He was eldest son of JOHN AKELAND, of Akeland, by Margaret, his wife, dau. and co-heiress of Hugh Radcliffe, of Stepney, and elder brother of Sir John Acland, Knt. of Columb-John, High Sheriff of Devon in 1608. Lineage—The family of Kennedy is traditionally descended from the ancient Earls of Carrick. The first of the family mentioned in any charter, Nisbet informs us, is Duncan de Carrick, afterwards 1st Earl of Carrick, and from the document it appears that he lived in the reign of Malcolm IV., which began about 1150. The grandson of Duncan, Roland, of Carrick, had a grant of the county of Carrick from his uncle Neil, 2nd Earl of Carrick, who d.s.p.m. 1256, and was declared chief of his name. The chieftainship was afterwards repeatedly confirmed to the Kennedy family. The direct ancestor,

John Kennedy, of Dunure, a very prominent personage in the reigns of David II. and Robert II., had a confirmatory charter from David II. of the lands of Castlys, co. Ayr, with other lands which he had acquired from Marjorie de Montgomerie. He acquired the barony of Dalrymple 1370 and 1376, and had a charter of his lands 1357-8, and again in 1381. He d. soon after 1385. He was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Gilbert Kennedy, one of the hostages delivered to the English, in 1357, for the liberation of David II. He m. Agnes, dau. of Sir John Maxwell of Pollok, and had, 1. James, his heir-apparent; 2. Alexander, d. unm.; 3. Hugh of Ardstynchar; 4. John, of Blairquhan; 5. Thomas, ancestor of Kennedy, of Bargany; and 6. David, of Kirkmichael. The eldest son,

James Kennedy, younger, of Dunure, m. 1405, Mary, dau. of King Robert III., and widow of George, Earl of Angus, and d.v.p., before 8 Nov. 1408, leaving issue, 1. John (Sir), long a prisoner in Stirling Castle; 2. Gilbert, 1st lord, heir to his grandfather; and 3. James, bishop of Dunkeld, and afterwards of St. Andrews, one of the greatest of Scottish statesmen and prelates, founder of St. Andrews University. The 2nd son,

Lineage—The family of Ogilvy derives its pedigree from the Mormaers of Angus, one of the seven great hereditary chiefs of Scotland, who in the 11th century exchanged that designation for the title of earl.

Gilibride, Earl of Angus, in the time of David I., had with other issue three sons, Angus, his successor in that earldom; Magnus, who through his mother s. to the earldom of Caithness; and Gilbert. The 3rd son,

Gilbert, assumed the surname of Ogilvy from lands so called in his possession, of which, with Powrie and Kyneithein in Angus, he had a charter in 1172. From him descended

Sir Patrick Ogilvy, of Wester Powrie, who had from Robert I. a charter of Kettins in Forfarshire. He had two sons, 1. Alexander, his heir, a quo the family of Ogilvy of Ogilvy, extinct; 2. Patrick.

Patrick Ogilvy, of Wester Powrie, the 2nd son, obtained from his nephew, Sir Patrick Ogilvy of Ogilvy, to him and Marjory,

The 2nd son,

SIR HENRY HAVELOCK, K.C.B., b. at Bishopwearmouth, co. Durham, 5 April, 1795, one of the most eminent soldiers of his time, was educated at the Charterhouse, and was originally a student of the Middle Temple. He became an officer in the British rifle brigade in 1815, and went first to India in 1823. He there took an active part in the first Burmese war. He was a captain in 1838; and was at the storming of Ghuznee, and the occupation of Cabul: he was also at the forcing of the Cabul Pass and the battle of Tezeen; and he commanded the right column in the sortie from Jellalabad and final victorious attack on Akbar, 7 April, 1842, for which he was made a major and a C.B. After various other services, he became a lieut.-col. in 1844, and went through the Sikh war, being present at the victories of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, and Sobraon. In the Persian war he was appointed to head the second division, and commanded at the battle of Mohammerah. On his return to Calcutta, he was sent as brigadier-general to relieve Cawnpore and succour Lucknow, then sorely pressed by the mutinous Sepoys. He consequently commenced, on 7 July, 1857, that memorable march, unparalleled in history, where, with only 1,400 British bayonets and eight guns, united to a small native force, and opposed to a countless mass of the enemy, when the slightest reverse would have been fatal, he proceeded victoriously through a country deluged with rain, from 7 July to 16 Sept., hurling back the foe in twelve severe engagements. Joined, on 16 Sept., by Sir James Outram and a few more troops, he stormed Lucknow, and effected his junction with and relief of its garrison. Then pent up in the Residency and its precincts at Lucknow, he and his band, with Spartan courage and more than Spartan success, held out for two months against all the efforts of the enemy until, by the advance of Sir Colin Campbell, 17 Nov. 1857, a victorious rescue was achieved. For these great services, as the news of them reached home, Havelock was made a major-general, 29 Sept. 1857; and a K.C.B., 17 Nov. 1857; and letters patent were directed, 26 Nov. 1857, to create him a baronet. The government also was about to grant an annuity of £1,000 for the lives of himself and his son: but the illustrious soldier did not live to obtain the baronetcy or pension. He was attacked with dysentery, brought on by the intense anxiety and fatigue he had undergone, and he died at the Dilkoosha, near Lucknow, 24 Nov. 1857, and was interred the next day in the Alum-bagh. Sir Henry Havelock was the author of a History of the Burmese War, and of the War in Afghanistan. He m. 9 Feb. 1829, Hannah Shepherd, dau. of the Rev. CARMICHAEL-ANSTRUTHER OF CARMICHAEL AND OF ANSTRUTHER.

Sir Windham Frederick Carmichael-Anstruther, 10th Bart., a Baronet of Nova Scotia and of Great Britain, Heritable Carver and one of the Masters of the Royal Household in Scotland; b. 30 April, 1902; s. his father, 1903, as 10th and 7th Bart.

Lineage—This great family has ranked among the barons of Scotland during upwards of seven centuries. In the year 1100 William de Candela was Lord of Anstruther. As, at that early period, it was customary for nobles to adopt their surnames from their lands, it was rare to find a Scottish baron who possessed a family name besides his territorial designation. One of the few who had this distinction was William, Lord of Anstruther. He had already a noble name, and in 1100 he was one of the most considerable of the barons in Fife. Thus, the nobility of this family is ascertained during the last eight centuries.

WILLIAM DE CANDELA, Lord of Anstruther, lived through the reign of King DAVID I., and did not die until the commencement of that of MALCOLM IV., who ascended the Scottish throne in 1153. William's son,

WILLIAM DE CANDELA, Lord of Anstruther, was a pious benefactor to the Abbey of Balmerino, and d. in the reign of King WILLIAM THE LION, which commenced in 1165. His son,

HENRY, in compliance with the usage of Scotland, assumed the name of his lands as his surname, and disused that of De Candela. He is styled Henricus de Anstruther Dominus de Anstruther in a charter wherein he confirms his father's pious donations to the Abbey of Balmerino in 1221, in the reign of King ALEXANDER II. He was a benefactor to the monastery of Dryburgh. His son,

HENRY DE ANSTRUTHER, Lord of Anstruther, was also a pious benefactor to the religious houses of Balmerino and Dryburgh in charters granted during the reign of King ALEXANDER II. He was a crusader, and accompanied St. Louis to the East. In his old age he was compelled to swear fealty for his barony of Anstruther to EDWARD I. of England in 1292 and 1296. His son,

WILLIAM DE ANSTRUTHER, Lord of Anstruther, lived in the reign of King ROBERT I. He confirmed the donations of his ancestors to the abbey of Dryburgh. He was father of

HENRY DE ANSTRUTHER, of Anstruther, who was father of

RICHARD DE ANSTRUTHER, of Anstruther, who lived to a great age, and d. in the reign of King JAMES I. of Scotland. He was father of

ROBERT DE ANSTRUTHER, of Anstruther, who d. in the reign of King JAMES III. He m. Elizabeth Balfour, a dau. of the ancient Fifeshire house of Balfour, since raised to the peerage by the title of Lord Burleigh. He was s. by his eldest son,

He seems to have m. 2ndly Janet Borthwick. He was s. by his son,

JOHN ANSTRUTHER, of Anstruther, had sasine of the lands 12 July, 1517, after they had been in the King's hands for over two years. He had charters dated 1527 and 1542. He m. 1st, Margaret Douglas, dau. of Thomas Douglas, of Lochleven,

ARGYLL.

The Duke of Argyll (Sir Niall Diarmid Campbell), Marquess of Kintyre and Lorn, Earl of Campbell and Cowall, Viscount of Lochow and Glenylas, Lord of Inverary, Mull, Morvern, and Tirie, in Scotland; Duke of Argyll in the United Kingdom, Earl of Argyll; Lord Campbell; Lord Lorne; Lord of Kintyre, all in Scotland; and Lord Sundridge of Coomb Bank, Kent, and Lord Hamilton, of Hameldon, co. Leicester, both in Great Britain, and a baronet of Scotland, Chief of the Clan Campbell, Hereditary Master of the King's Household in Scotland, Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland, Admiral of the Western Coasts and Isles; Keeper of Dunstaffnage, Carrick, Tarbert, and Dunoon Castles, and Hereditary Sheriff of Argyll, Honorary Colonel of the 8th Batt. Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, D.L. Argyllshire, b. 16 Feb. 1872, s. his uncle as 10th duke 1914.

Lineage—Nine centuries ago, Gillespic Campbell acquired, by marriage with Eva, dau. of the Treasurer of Scotland, Paul O'Duin, Chief of the clan O'Duin, descended of Diarmid, the lordship of Lochow, in Argyllshire, and from him descended

Sir Colin Campbell, of Lochow (son of Sir Gillespic Campbell), who, distinguished as well by the great acquisitions he had made to his estate, as his achievements in war, obtained the surname of Mor, or Great; and from him the chief of the house is in the Gaelic styled, to this day, Mac Calein Mor. He was knighted by Alexander III., 1280, and was one of the nominees, 1291, on the part of Robert Bruce, in the contest for the crown of Scotland. This renowned and gallant chieftain was slain about 1296 in a conflict with his powerful neighbour, the Lord of Lorne, at a place called the String of Lorne, where a cairn is erected over his grave. The event occasioned continued feuds for a series of years between the houses of Lochow and Lorn, which terminated at last by the marriage of the first Earl of Argyll with the heiress of Lorn. Sir Colin m. a lady of the name of St. Clair, and had,

1. Neil, his successor.
2. Donald, ancestor of Campbell, Earl of Loudoun (see that title).
3. Dugald (Sir), who swore fealty to Edward I. in 1296, but afterwards joined Robert Bruce.
4. Arthur, who, having sworn fidelity with his brother to King Edward, like him, afterwards joined Robert Bruce, from whom he obtained two charters of the constabulary of Dunstaffnage, with the mains thereof.
5. Duncan, likewise a supporter of the Bruce.

Sir Colin was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Nigel (or Niel) Campbell, who was knighted by Alex. III. towards the close of that monarch's reign. He joined Robert Bruce in 1296, and adhered to him in prosperity and adversity, and fought by his side in almost every field, from the battle of Methven to that of Bannockburn. The king had so high a sense of Campbell's services that he gave him his sister, Lady Mary Bruce, in marriage, and granted to him and his said wife, and John their son, all the lands which belonged to David de Strathbogie, Earl of Atholl. When the triumph of Bannockburn had decided the independence of Scotland, Sir Niel Campbell was one of the great barons in the parliament which met at Ayr, 26 April, 1315, and fixed the succession to the crown. Sir Niel seems to have m. 1st, about Feb. 1301-2, Margaret, widow of Hubert de Multon, and by her had issue,

1. Colin, his heir.
2. Dugald, who had an agreement with his uncle Dugald, 3 Aug. 1323. He had a son John, who left a dau. Margaret, m. her kinsman Colin Campbell, of Lochow.

He m. 2ndly (according to tradition) Margaret Cameron, and by her had issue, a son,

3. Duncan, ancestor of Campbell of Inverawe.

He m. 3rdly, about 1312, Lady Mary Bruce, sister of King Robert Bruce, and by her, who m. 2ndly, 1316, Sir Alexander Fraser, Great Chamberlain of Scotland, had issue,

4. John of Moulin, b. about 1313, created Earl of Atholl, by his cousin David II. He m. Joan, dau. of Sir John Menteith, and widow of Malise, Earl of Strathern, but d.s.p. killed at the battle of Halidon Hill 19 July, 1333, when the title became extinct. She m. 3rdly, 1339, Sir Maurice Moray, of Drumsargard, who d. 17 Oct. 1346, and 4thly, 1347, William, 4th Earl of Sutherland, who d. 1370.

Sir Niel d. before 1316, and was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Colin Campbell, lord of Lochow, who had a charter of that lordship 10 Feb. 1315. He accompanied the king into Ireland, in 1316, to assist in placing his brother, Edward Bruce, upon the throne of that kingdom. Sir Colin, in 1334, assisted the Steward of Scotland in the recovery of the Castle of Dunoon from the English, which gave the first turn of fortune in favour of King David Bruce, and he was in consequence appointed heritable governor of that fortress. He m., it is said, Helena, dau. of Sir John Mor, son of the Earl of Lennox, and had three sons and a dau., viz.,

1. Archibald.
2. John, ancestor of the Campbells of Barbreck, Succoth, and others. This John Campbell appears to have held Ardskeodnish as well as Barbreck. His descendants continued possessed of the latter estate until the male heirs having failed in the 16th generation, the heiress conveyed Barbreck to her husband, Colin Campbell, who in right of his marriage assumed the designation of "Barbreck," and as he was descended from Sir Colin Campbell, father of John, the first Campbell of Barbreck, the link of the male line was thus restored. Frederick William Campbell, 17th of Barbreck, disposed of his estate in Argyllshire.
3. Dugald, m. Margaret, sister of John Glasreth, of Glassary, but joined Baliol, and forfeited his estates.
1. Alicia, m. Allan Lauder, of Hatton, living 13 June, 1371.

He d. before 2 May, 1343, and was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Archibald (or Gillespie) Campbell, lord of Lochow, who was granted by David II many forfeited lands 2 May, 1343. He did homage to Robert II 26 March, 1371. He m. Mary, or Isabella, dau. of Sir John Lamont, of that ilk, and had issue,

1. Colin, his heir.
2. Duncan, ancestor of Campbell, of Glenfeochan.
1. Helena, m. Duncan, 8th Earl of Lennox.

He d. before 1394. His eldest son,

Sir Colin Campbell, of Lochow, who m. 1st, Margaret, 2nd dau. of Sir John Drummond, of Stobhall, and sister of Annabella, Queen Consort of Robert III., by whom he had no issue. He m. 2ndly, sometime before 1 April, 1387, his cousin Margaret, dau. of John Campbell, son of Dugald Campbell, son of Sir Niel Campbell (see above), and by her had issue,

1. Duncan (Sir).
2. Colin, of Ardkinglas, ancestor of Campbell, of Ardentinny, Dunoon, Carrick, Skipnish, Blythswood, Shawfield, Rachan, Auchwillin, and Dergachie.
3. Dugald, ancestor of Campbell, of Dunstaffnage.
4. Donald, living 4 Aug. 1442.
1. Christian, m. Duncan Macfarlane, of Arrochar.

Sir Colin d. before 1414, and was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Duncan Campbell, of Lochow, 1st Lord Campbell, who was raised to the dignity of a lord of parliament by James II., in 1445, by the title of Lord Campbell, having in the previous reign been of the privy council, and been appointed the king's justiciary, and lord lieutenant of the co. Argyll. His lordship m. 1st, Lady Marjory (or Marcellina) Stewart, dau. of Robert, Duke of Albany, Regent of Scotland, and granddau. of King Robert, and by her (who d. before Aug. 1432) had issue,

1. Archibald (or Celestin), Master of Campbell, m. Elizabeth, dau. of John, 3rd Lord Somerville, of Carnwath; and 2ndly, it is said, a dau. of Murdac, Duke of Albany. He d. before March, 1440, v.p., leaving a son,
Colin, 2nd lord and 1st earl.

Lord Campbell m. 2ndly, before 12 March, 1439-40, Margaret, dau. of Sir John Stewart, of Blackhall, natural son of Robert III., and had four more sons, viz.,

3. Neil, ancestor of Campbell of Ellengreig, and of Ormadale.
4. Duncan, of Auchinbreck, ancestor of Campbell, Bart. of Auchinbreck and the cadets of Glencardell, Glensaddell, etc.
5. Archibald, ancestor of Campbell of Otter, now extinct.

Lord Campbell was one of the hostages for the redemption of James I., in 1424, for whom he collected the ransom taking it to Windsor. His annual revenue at that time was stated to be fifteen hundred marks, a larger income than that of any other of the hostages. He d. at the close of the year 1453 and was s. by his grandson,

Colin, 2nd Lord Campbell and 1st Earl of Argyll, so created 1457. The galley of Lorne has ever since formed part of the family achievement. By this lady, who d. 26 Oct. 1510, the Earl had issue,

2. Thomas, ancestor of Campbell of Lundie.
